RELIGION

Fish House followers come from all faiths

By Mary Bridgman

Dispatch Accent Reporter is filled.

Rick Morris clips a microphone to his open collar. "If and say amens. you're here tonight and you're the head of the football team, we don't care about that," he tells the crowd. "If you're the loser, we don't care about that either. We care about the role you play in the body of Christ."

The crowd listens intently. "You have to open the door and let him (Jesus Christ) in. Don't go through another day of alienation. Don't do that."

Fish House is a church without pulpit or pews, where Bluegrass music replaces old-style and a one-time Baptist.

hymns, testimonials replace the Lord's Prayer and wooden boxes Sunday night and Fish House replace offering plates. Its Bibletoting congregation comes dressed in jeans to sing alleluias > lics, Baptists, Jews, Methodists and more - are threaded to- ness," she said. gether by an ecclesiastical fervor to accept Jesus Christ as Lord and Savior. Many are disillu- House is church, and Jesus sioned with their former churches. Most are between the the life. ages of 15 and 35.

"I USED TO go to church every Sunday, just out of guilt — God," said Barbara Scali, 22, a senior at Ohio State University

Ministers question strict principles

The fervent fundamentalism of Fish House pulses through the congregation. The message is unequivocal: accept Christ or live eternally in hell.

It is preached over and over asked. at the large central gatherings and in the home churches. It is an essential biblical doctrine and a basic tenet of the ministry, said Gary Delashmutt, a founding member and a Fish House

With essential doctrines in the Bible, there is no room for debate.

Yet it is this perceived narrow acceptance — "believe as I believe and do as I do" — that some find objectionable.

"It is very dangerous," said the Rev. Jack Collins, pastor of St. Thomas More Newman Center, 64 W. Lane Ave. "It ignores the true content of scripture. I don't think life is that black and white."

After a person accepts house church.' Christ, he still must deal with his own sinful nature, Collins ents of children involved in the are being snatched out of the for Christ's forgiveness.

Too, Collins said, Fish House ignores some aspects of human life. "How does one integrate into their religion the experience of the human condition?" he

At the Newman Center, Sister Marie Sweeney has formed a self-help group for former Fish House followers and for friends of followers. The group, Collins said, helps people "come out of their poor experience."

While the Fish House leadership is doing an admirable job, the Rev. Bill Lewis said he has transforms lives," said Mark counseled people who have had a "dreadful experience" there.

"Their relationship with Je- himself a completed Jew. sus Christ got messed up in Fish," said Lewis, campus pastor Christian Reform Church. "It is by Christ and why don't you do hard for people who are unsure something about it," said Verto have room to explore and ask ber, who attends weekly home Consequently, he advises par- Ken Gilbert agreed. "People said Delashmutt. learn about Fish House.

Her sister introduced her to Fish House 14 months ago. "I came and I knew they were speaking the truth," she said. "I had never heard it."

Scali said she accepted Christ The 1,400 followers — Catho- into her life on Jan. 22, 1982. "I was a sinner. I needed forgive-

> Scali is typical of many Fish House followers. For them, Fish Christ is the way, the truth and

They stream into the large meeting room at Four Flags Office Forum at 800 Freeway Dr. not because I wanted to serve N., and into the multipurpose room at the former Calumet School, 2774 Calumet Ave., on Sunday and Tuesday evenings to listen to teachers who have studied the Bible with Fish House elders.

> Typically, more than 300 people crowd into the meeting rooms to listen to talks on the Bible's meaning for today.

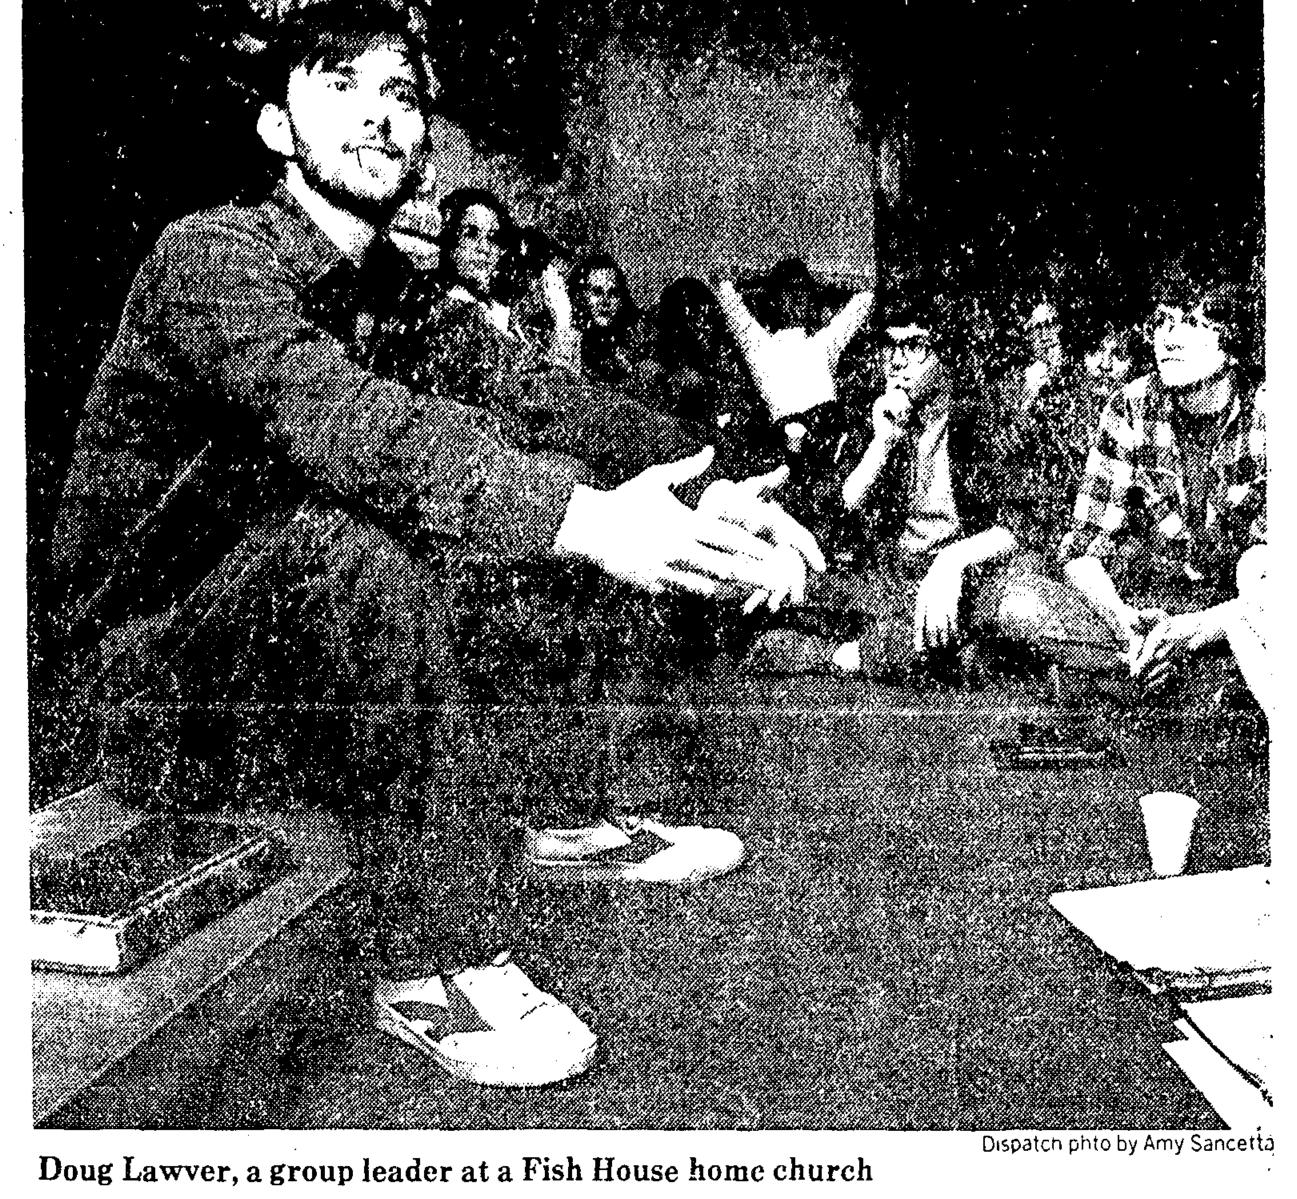

> At the 30 Fish House "home churches," which also meet weekly, some 25 to 60 followers gather in more casual surroundings - living rooms and classrooms — for more of the same. They sprawl comfortably on the floor and crowd onto sofas for Bible study, prayers and singing, then share punch and cookies.

SOME OF the home churches spawn cell groups, made up of five or six persons who meet for additional sharing and spiritual growth.

'This is the first place I had seen grace preached and how it Verber, 20, who for 18 years was at Ohio State University.

"It's the love and the acceptance, the emphasis you are a at Ohio State University for the Christian and you've been saved questions, especially at the church meetings and is a cell group leader.

a handful of OSU students dur- elders spent a year at a semiing the turbulent spring of 1970 as a campus-based fellowship.

to share with others what we said. had found," said Gary Delashmutt, one of the founders and one of five elders now running the organization from offices at 3400 N. High St.

INITIALLY, they published an underground newspaper, The a practicing Jew. Now, he calls • Fish. The Lane Ave. home where they first met was dubbed the fish house and the name stuck, though recently the name was changed to Xenos Christian Fellowship. Followers, however, ha- games. ven't made the name switch.

> "We teach and show people how to love; we teach and show people the truth of the Bible, said. In traditional religion, fellowship to, at least initially, devil's hands," said Gilbert, 27, a elders paid full-time salaries. who like the message (in tradi- dropped drugs. I tried to get my churches leave room for that and attend meetings with them to doctoral candidate in chemistry. Delashmutt said he and another tional churches) but they don't life together according to biblielder completed two years of like the cultural change they cal principles."

Fish House was launched by seminary training. Two other nary. The organization is considered tax-exempt by the Internal "It was a spontaneous desire Revenue Service, Delashmutt > both children and adults, De-truth," said Cleary. lashmutt defends it. The church should be a witnessing community, he said.

said. "We're reaching a tremendous number of junior high and high school kids. They don't want to just sit around and play

"We know it does work," he

THE MESSAGE at Fish House, he said, is not appreciably different from the messages spoken from many local pulpits.

have to go through. They don't like the 17th-century hymns. They don't like dressing up Surt day morning.

They are people such as Molly Cleary. "When I started to get While Fish House has come serious with a personal relation: under private criticism for its ship with God, I came here bezealous evangelism, aimed at cause I knew they spoke the

> Her road to Fish House began more than 10 years ago. "I couldn't live up to the morality the Catholic Church was teaching." said Cleary, 23, an OSU sophomore. "I stopped going to church. I got into drugs. I left morality behind.'

Five years ago, a friend took her to Fish House. "When I found out Jesus Christ was alive and it was tangible — that he is a personal God and cares about Delashmutt is one of three "There are a lot of people the individual — I went for it. I

Columbus Dispatch (online), 23 Apr 1983 5 <a href="https://infoweb.newsbank.com/apps/news/document-view?p=WORLDNEWS&docref=image/v2%3A1467499E363272B3%40EANX-NB-1646D1F32F1F8B06%402445448-1646CF198134EA45%404-1646CF198146AA45%404-1646CF198146AA45%404-1646CF1981